

Call for Evidence: we would like to hear from you

We know that the expertise to make the shift towards a more community powered NHS already exists in practice. There are lots of initiatives out there pioneering different ways of working.

We would love to hear your stories, insights, innovations, and observations about the opportunities for, and barriers to, community power in the NHS.

This call for evidence will inform a major report which we will publish later this year, setting out a new vision for a community-powered NHS.

Call for Evidence questions

- What opportunities would a community-powered NHS bring, and what barriers exist which might prevent us getting there?
- What are the best examples of community power in health services?
- How do you think the system needs to change to address health inequalities and make a shift towards prevention?
- Are there examples of best practice from other countries that we in the UK could learn from?
- Has the Covid-19 pandemic changed the how NHS services work with communities? Are there any innovations we should consider keeping for the future?

How to submit your views to our call for evidence

We would really like to hear from you, and hope to make submitting evidence as simple and accessible as possible. You can either:

- Send us a written submission addressing any or all of the questions above (in Word or pdf format)
- Send us a video or audio submission in response to any or all of the above questions (in mp4 format)

All submissions should be sent to callforevidence@newlocal.org.uk by 5 July 2021.

Please indicate in your submission if you are willing for your organisation to be listed as having submitted evidence.

How we'll use submissions

Your submissions will be confidential, but will feed into a major report we will publish later this year that sets out how community power can transform the NHS.

Any specific submissions will only be made attributable with your written permission.
